2. Social housing in „liberal” times

- Growing need for affordable and accessible housing
- Issues for urban development policies
- Consequences for real estate and land markets
- Consequences for social stratification of the city – pushing the „social” components away from city core (growing ghettoization)

3. Challenges posed by COVID-19 pandemic

- Lockdown procedures – need to „stay at home” and „within Your community”
- Rediscovering the values of local greenery and outdoor recreational infrastructures
- Need to rediscover the local shopping and other businesses – as the only way to get Your in-person
- Challenges associated with job cuts and business closings

4. Different situations

- „Traditional” social housing complexes for the people in need of affordable accomodation
- New solutions for people within the „lockdown” realities
- New types of „social” solutions

4.1. „Traditional” social housing

- Affordable solutions for people facing difficulties associated with changes in economic situation
- Appreciation of the comprehensive approach to the social infrastructure – including local shopping and community facilities
- Reintroducing the local community-oriented spatial solutions, including facilities for remote working

4.2. „New solutions” for lock-down realities

- Understanding that „local businesses” matter – and providing spatial frameworks for these
- Rediscovering the values (and spatial solutions) associated with the social interactions and community building and maintaining processes
- Need for „out-from-home” home-office solutions

5. Physical changes in cities

- New types of urban structures – 15-mins cities
- Co-working and boutique-type offices
- New spaces for social interactions and community development
- New spaces for local businesses – rediscovering the „street-side” shopping and commercial services

6. Challenges for urban policies

- Rediscovering the „social face” of housing – place to live, work, interact
- Accelerating the introduction of the 15-mins cities and compact, multi-use urban structures
- Rethinking the roles and shapes of urban transportation
